architect | Luis Barragan
location | Mexico City, Mexico

Luis Barragan's designs utilized traditional Mexican architectural elements such as simple surfaces, natural environments, water features, and bold color to reassert traditional Mexican style during a time when the government rejected it. He took these traditional design elements to the next level by enhancing them with the use of natural light to intensify and glisten. The emotional experience felt by his works focuses on surrealism to create spaces that seem dreamlike and resemble spaces which are made for someone bigger than man.
